Tips for overseas students

If you are an overseas student you must check if the organisation you want to study with is registered to deliver training to overseas students, and is listed on the Commonwealth Register of Institutions and Courses for Overseas Students (CRICOS) at cricos.education.gov.au.

If your education provider has not delivered the course you are enrolled in, you may be entitled to a full refund. Contact the Education Services for Overseas Student (ESOS) Helpline on 1300 615 262 or complete the online enquiry form from the contacts page at www.internationaleducation.gov.au

You cannot transfer to another education provider before completing the first six months of your principal course, without a release letter from your provider.
Check your written agreement to see what your provider's policy says about transferring to another provider as well as fees and refunds.

If you are dissatisfied with a decision or action taken by your provider, you can lodge an internal complaint or appeal with them directly.

If you are attending a self-accrediting university, for example the University of Sydney, you should contact the International Students Office of your university for any concerns or enquiries.

If this does not resolve the problem with your private school, college or university, the Overseas Students Ombudsman may be able to help. Contact the Ombudsman on 1300 362 072 or at ombudsman.gov.au.
